

University of Wisconsin - Madison

Associate Medical Director, Primary Care, University Health Services

The Associate Medical Director for Primary Care is a leadership position with direct and indirect patient care responsibilities at University Health Services (UHS), the student health service at the University of Wisconsin-Madison. This position, working in collaboration with other clinic managers and the Director of Clinical Services, will develop systems of care which foster continuity of care, optimal outcomes for patient health, and a successful health care team environment. The Associate Medical Director provides direct supervision of physician, nurse practitioner and physician assistant staff within Primary Care as well as administrative supervision of the primary care nurse manager. In addition the individual in this position will also provide direct patient care. The Associate Medical Director serves as back-up to the Director of Clinical Services when necessary. The position requires strong leadership and communication skills, experience in directing medical staff and an excellent knowledge base of primary care medicine. Duties are performed under the general supervision of, and the position reports to, the Director of Clinical Services.
